ICYMI: ASRM and SSR Collaborate

Your Feedback is Needed

ASRM (The American Society for Reproductive Medicine) and SSR have joined forces in response to a need to expand research opportunities across the field of reproductive health, medicine, and science, to create a collaborative initiative called Scientists and Physicians Advancing Reproductive Knowledge- (SPARK) Program. The purpose of this multi-organizational initiative is to create networking opportunities whereby clinicians, physician-scientists, and scientists can come together to facilitate resource sharing, establish collaborative research opportunities, and aid in knowledge dissemination across our field, with the goal of increasing research, innovation, and discovery.

In order to evaluate the interest of ASRM and SSR members in participating in the SPARK program, please complete this brief survey to share your interests as part of this program.

For those interested in learning more about this exciting collaboration, please join us at the SSR Annual Conference on Friday, July 14th, from 12pm - 1:15pm, in Meeting Room 215 for an introductory meeting.*
