

Dr. Shuo Xiao is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Pharmacology and Toxicology at Rutgers University and also a principal investigator in the Environmental and Occupational Health Sciences Institute (EOHSI) at Rutgers. He received his medical degree in Preventive Medicine and Master's degree in Toxicology from Peking University Health Science Center. Dr. Xiao obtained his PhD in Reproductive Toxicology from Dr. Xiaoqin Ye's lab at The University of Georgia in 2013. He then joined Dr. Teresa Woodruff's lab to complete his postdoctoral training at Northwestern University. Dr. Xiao's current research interests at Rutgers University include 3D in vitro ovarian tissue culture, organ-on-a-chip, ovarian toxicology, and novel non-hormonal contraceptive development.